Little Contestants' Mothers Learn

How to Make Baby Strong and Healthy

Dr. Stafford McLean, of Babies' Hospital, Speaks to Half a Hundred Women at Little Mothers' Aid Meeting, as Entries for Prizes Close.

Greenwich Village Sends Thirty-seven More Entrants, Making Total 335 in Three Days—Nurses at Milk Station Help Boom Registration.

More than half a hundred mothers listened eagerly to the combined catechism and counsel offered yesterday afternoon by Dr. Stafford McLean of the Babies' Hospital, at No. 238 Second Avenue, the headquarters of the Better Babies' Contest organized by The Evening World and the Little Mothers' Aid Association. Almost 400 babies have been registered in this contest, the area of which extends from Fifth Avenue to the East River, between Seventh and Twenty-eighth streets, and the mothers have shown a tremendous interest in the weekly talks on infant hygiene. Yesterday Dr. McLean gathered all the different threads of his subject into a coherent and cohesive whole.

"Although we doctors urge all of you women to nurse your own children," he began, "there is a time when this nursing must stop. Yet I am sure you have all known mothers who nursed their babies until they were two or three years old. Italian mothers are particularly apt to do this. Haven't you known of such cases?"

Several women nodded eagerly. "But why was this done?" demanded Dr. McLean, pointing his finger at one plump, dark-eyed matron.

"To save money," she answered, between a shrug and a smile, and there was a ripple of laughter in which even Dr. McLean joined.

"A little money may be saved," he admitted. "Nevertheless, a mother should begin to wean her baby at eight or nine months, unless it is in the middle of the summer. Then comes the question of feeding the baby from a bottle or from a cup. In the very beginning it should be accustomed to drink milk from a small cup, holding one or two ounces. Part of the time it may be allowed to use a bottle. Just before going to sleep is a good time to give a bottle to the baby. When the time comes to wean the child from the bottle altogether, at the age of two or three, the process should be gradual and persistent. If necessary, the child at this age will not be injured by letting it go without food for a day.

PATENT FOODS LIKELY TO PRODUCE RICKETS.

"A child should not be fed with patent foods for any considerable period, as these have a tendency to produce rickets or scurvy. Rickets is simply low legs and is a pretty bad disease of the bone.

"The baby's milk should be made up in the morning and then away in the refrigerator. Some mothers haven't a refrigerator because they think it costs too much. But a suitable one can be bought for $20 or $25. It must not be made entirely of metal, but must be lined with wood, to keep the temperature below 50 degrees.

"When the baby is weaned sugar should be used in the milk formula, because the mother's milk contains a great deal of sugar. But what is called milk sugar is very expensive, and granulated sugar does just as well, except that less must be used; 1½ teaspoonfuls where 2 teaspoonfuls of milk sugar would be necessary. Cream is less easily digested by children than whole milk formula. If you think that you are not using the right milk formula for your child, make changes carefully and gradually.

"A child who wants to nurse from a half to three-quarters of an hour at a time, and who cries after feeding, is not receiving sufficient nourishment. Also a child should gain in weight every week. A child weighing three pounds at birth should weigh fifteen pounds at the age of five months. The only exception to this rule is when a child is first given a bottle. At that time it may probably gain nothing for two or three weeks while getting into its stride."

FEEDS BABY EVERYTHING—INCLUDING BEER.

Then Dr. McLean questioned his auditors about their methods of adding other food to the milk diet. "My baby has had the same things to eat as myself ever since he was five months old," volunteered one woman. "Sometimes, even, he has a little beer." "There's now and then a baby that will stand anything," Dr. McLean retorted laconically. "Many children would be dead after such treatment." "Beginning at seven or eight months, the baby may have a teaspoonful of cereal at night and morning. It may also have a tablespoonful of finely chopped spinach daily when it's a month or two older. But be careful about over-feeding. An over-fed baby is likely to mean a two-year-old with chronic indigestion. When the baby doesn't eat well, let it alone; don't force it. When it has a bad cold or an attack of indigestion give plenty of water, but cut down the food allowance. And be sure

WILSON BANS RECESS PLANNED BY SENATE; WANTS WORK FINISHED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—President Wilson to-day informed Democratic Senators that he is unalterably opposed to any recess of the Senate between the tariff bill and currency bill. He made it plain to them that he believes it the duty of the Democratic party not to hesitate in its program of legislative reform but to dispose of the tariff and currency during the present session of Congress, so that the December session may promptly take up anti-trust and other important legislation carrying out platform pledges.

The President communicated his views through Secretary Tumulty, who last night and early to-day got in touch with most of the Democratic Senators and came to conclusion that a substantial majority was in favor of immediate legislation and no recess. Incidentally the President took a strong position on the question of legislative agreements between Democrats and Republicans in Congress. He believes that the Democrats, as the dominant party, should proceed with determination and not trade with the minority. The fact that Republican Senators had informally agreed to speed up consideration of the tariff bill if a recess were assured after its passage, prompted the President to urge that business throughout the country demanded early action on the tariff regardless of whether any vacation or recess was promised in return.

Democratic Senators were caucusing on the recess proposal at the time President Wilson's views were being made known. The caucus adjourned until to-night without getting to the question, because of an early meeting of the Senate, and because of time consumed in discussion of an unexpected resolution by Majority Leader Kern to open the caucus to the public. Mr. Kern's motion to open was voted down, but he declared it would come up again to-night with the question of recess and the whole question of a legislative program.

Senator James of Kentucky, who came directly from the White House to the caucus, outlined President Wilson's plan against recess or delay of currency legislation.

"The President is opposed to any delay on currency," said Senator James. "I think the Democrats will give him unanimous support."

A few men, who do not even represent the minority party, are filibustering against the tariff and holding up progress. I am in favor not only of a continuous session but of a closure rule that will shut off some of this filibuster and hold the Senate down to business."

The proposal for a closure rule will be discussed at to-night's caucus. Several Democratic Senators have submitted resolutions to limit talk.

The new lowered prices are so far below their original rates that every one who comes here tomorrow may be sure of a surprise. Every dress is part of the carefully chosen Wanamaker stocks (none was bought specially for this clearaway) and the styles are those which have gained Fashion's approval this summer.
